THE SENATE

THE ROLE OF THE SENATE - UPDATED 27.09.2010

- 1.0 Much of the business of the Senate will stem from the committees reporting to it. As well as approving (or not) major strategies in their final form the Senate would be expected to comment on them at an early stage and guide their development.
 - 2.0 Another major role of the Senate is to review the academic performance of the University. That occurs from time to time through policy reviews
 - 3.0 The Senate also conducts an annual review of its own effectiveness and of the committees reporting to the Senate. This review is important to provide assurance that the structure is working effectively and to give the opportunity to make adjustments. The Senate, and each of its committees, reviews the business conducted against the terms of reference, the attendance and the membership. OUSA and the Associate Lecturers Executive also review whether the arrangements for their representation have worked effectively, particularly the reference groups which will meet before each meeting of the Senate.
 - 4.0 The academic governance structure operates in the context of the University's overall governance structure, headed by the governing body, the Council. A key committee is the Strategic Planning and Resources Committee (SPRC). That is a joint committee of the Council and the Senate but where a Council decision is required on a strategy of the University, SPRC makes a recommendation to the Council having, where relevant, taken the advice of the Senate either in the form of consultation with the Senate or one of its committees, or through the Senate representation on SPRC.

THE SENATE

THE ROLE OF SENATE MEMBERS - UPDATED 26.03.2018

1. Role of Senate members

The Code of Practice for University Elections and Committee Procedure considered by the Senate in June 2005 sets out the following statement:

“The Senate and its committees shall exercise their responsibilities in a corporate manner, with decisions taken collectively in the interests of the institution as a whole. Members should at all times conduct themselves in accordance with accepted standards of behaviour in public life. They should not act individually or as representatives of a constituency or take decisions on an informal basis outside the constitutional framework. When speaking or voting, they shall not be bound by mandates given to them by others.”

Senate members should be able to contribute to discussions on major issues of academic strategy, policy, priority and performance.

2. Participation

The Code of Practice for University Elections and Committee Procedure sets out the following statement:

“Members should ensure that they have read the relevant papers, and are otherwise adequately briefed, before each meeting. Members are expected to attend regularly, and to participate in meetings of University bodies. Reasonable arrangements should be made to enable remote participation by those working at other University sites, subject to technological limitations and advance notice to the Secretary. It is recognised that circumstances may sometimes prevent attendance or remote participation, and apologies should be sent to the secretary in such cases. The secretary should monitor attendance to support overall effectiveness reviews, and to enable specific problems to be addressed.”

The Secretary will monitor attendance to support overall effectiveness reviews, and to enable specific problems to be addressed. A 75% overall attendance rate should be expected.

Regular attendance by a substantial number of the membership is essential to ensure the legitimacy of decisions. A quorum of 50%+1 of the membership at any meeting has been agreed by the Senate to help to guarantee this legitimacy.
